William Vandervoort Draper will probably bring a suit against his father-in-law for $200,000 damages. He said yesterday that he certainly would do so if Mr. Hurry did not immediately offer an abject apology for the indignities he had inflicted upon

There is a pretty story involved in this affair of how "settlements" are arranged among the "smarr set" in these days of rich marriages. Much of the trouble between the Draper and Hurry families was caused by the fact that one of the partles falled to earry out the marriage settlement contract, when William V. A truce was patched up between the young couple and the Hurry family last year, when Mr. and Mrs. Hurry returned from Europe. A few days ago a story was published that Mr. and Mrs. Draper had soparated. The only foundation for the story was young Mrs. Draper's visit to the in the city. But Mr. Hurry believed the published report, and when Mr. Draper called to explain that there was no truth in it he was summarily ejected from the house and arrested.

The affair has caused a great sensation in society, which will be intensified if Mr. Draper carries out his threat to sue Mr. Hurry for $200,000 damages.
